CHAMBERLAIN'S FOES

LACK INFLUENCE IN THE SENATE
 —————
 Of the United States—A London Paper I sends Him—No Fund for the London Poor—The Irish Question Must be Speedily Settled.—Mr. Gladstone.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Mr. John Dillon has so often proclaimed an approaching crisis in Ireland that his predictions have come to be regarded with a measureable degree of interest.

cession of a few more English Liberal martyrs to the list headed by Sir Wilfrid Blunt will do more to secure the adherence to the home rule cause than thousands hitherto vacillating imprisonment of scores of Irish born subjects. It is certain that the Irish leaders are of this opinion, for their elation at the result of the Woodford meeting is undisguised, despite the regrets they express at the indignities inflicted upon their English ally. The journals exhibit a grim satisfaction at the event, intimating that if Sir Willfrd's natural bias of mind leads him to affiliate with the enemies of his country, as heretofore evidenced by his episode with Arad Pasha and supplemented by his leading prohibited meetings in Ireland, he must not expect to be treated with more consideration than mutinous Egyptian soldiers or riotous Irish peasants. There is no doubt that the government forces in Ireland have become tired of half-way work, and the number of injured among their opponents in recent chance affrays, evictions and dispersed meetings sufficiently shows the vigor with which the

There is a great feeling in England that the Irish question must be speedily settled in order that the Government may turn its attention in some manner to quieting the riotous masses in London, both those who can get no work to do and the great number who merely seek an occasion for plunder. Several matters are also being unduly neglected, but as the Standard remarks, it would not be a sound principle of statesmanship to leave Irish affairs like a fortress in the rear merely masked and flanked; it must be either reduced or the siege must be abandoned.

- GLADSTONE WORN OUT.

A deliberate review of Mr. Gladstone's late speeches forces the admission that there is some point to the remarks of the tory journals anent them that the homophobes and rure scheme has become vague and shifiting and ing and that his adherents are becoming uneasy at the delay of the changes they in. His opponents do not hesitate to declare that he has worn himself out, temporarily at least, mentally as well as physically, and that the orders of his physicians to cease speaking for awhile were very preteritory. No one who knows the Premier believes that he will long hesitate to give any advice, submission to which will lead to the belief that the time is nigh when he must bid farewell to the political arena. His conservatism is mons. His conscientious belief in his mission and his wonderful powers of endurance will doubtless sustain him through this campaign at least.

Hopes for Chamberlain's Success.
LONDON, Oct. 28.—The Standard, referring to the attacks upon Mr. Chamberlain, says Irishmen before now have found their costs that their aspirations will not be allowed to interfere with civil order in America. It will be something new if a otherwise satisfactory arrangement should be rejected because it clashes with Irish predictions, nor ought it to be forgotten that the decision of America's foreign policy practically lies with the Senate in which Irish wire-pullers have no overwhelming influence.

powerful influence. We are hopeful, therefore, that Mr. Chamberlain will be successful in his mission.
